

Cyphaspis → Aulacopleuridae → Aulacopleuroidea → Proetina → Proetida
(Adrain 2011) → Aulacopleurina → Aulacopleurida

Two dorsal photographs (below in greater detail)...

...two slightly oblique lateral photos...

...and a frontal detail photo at max magnification in a failed attempt to show the 4 “tubercles” (in actuality an elongated egg-shaped thingy atop a tubercle...which is not really visible in the pictures below). This may actually be a sub-species (hence the “cf.” in the name) as in the description of the species, there’s such-like egg-shaped things atop of the eyes as well.
