→ Odontopleuridae → Koneprusinae

Provenance : Morocco; Taharajat (southern Djebel Oufatene)

Formation : ? Fm

Age : Devonian

Details : Complete specimen with somewhat shorter spines than usually seen IN K. dahmani. Bought with intent of further prep (with sad story attached : I'd already started the additional prepping, when I was asked to display my year's work in the lab for our own fossil fair, Paleoforum. When one of our members took a piece out of the display case to show more closely to one of the visitors, a kid went behind his back into the display case, picking up one stone to show his younger sister "how those beasties went about eating each other", in the process breaking off several spines. To date (August 2023), I still haven't found the courage to continue the prep, nor of getting the specimen to a specialist to have the spines glued back in their place).
